An Open Letter

On Annexation

1946 Wilson Ave.,
Chicago, Illinois.
September 4, 1927.

Editor News-Bulletin:
Mokena, Illinois.

Dear Sir:-
Last Wednesday evening the Village council did some exceptionally good work by passing a resolution to annex the McIntosh Addition to Mokena, 100 per cent co-operation and the right spirit was shown by the fact that every member present voted in favor of the annexation.

It will prove a great help to the village in securing more taxable property, more families, more homes, and more money will be spent with the merchants in Mokena which just spells "Progress".

This tract is bounded by the Ben Marti Subdivision, Wolf Road, James V. Hall farm and Midland or Neithammer avenue.

The voters of Mokena now become vitally interested in executing this resolution by voting for the annexation themselves and for progress. I sincerely hope that the voters will give this matter their consideration, and I am sure that they will arrive at the opinion and vote "Yes".

Mokena is especially well located, and so close to tremendous developments, that I believe it is on the threshold of great development. It is about an hours ride from what is destined to become the world's greatest city and workshop, and only a few minutes from another fair sized city. Think this over.

It is inevitable that Mokena must develop and go forward.

But, let us lay the right foundation by adopting the most comprehensive Zoning Ordinance which can be worked out. This will be taken care of at the next meeting. Why not attend these meetings, help the council, and put Mokena on the map.

Let me also call your attention to a clause which appears in every deed issued to a lot owner in the McIntosh Addition. It reads as follows: "It is an express condition of this conveyance that the premises herein described shall not be conveyed or leased by the grantees, or any of the successors in title of the grantees, to any person who is not a Caucasian; that neither the premises herein described nor any improvements erected thereon shall be occupied by any one who is not a Caucasian."

I know that every voter is conscientious in building and enhancing values of the property in the village. I know that all desire better things for themselves and for their children and so I also feel secure in detailing the above facts and asking each voter to vote "Yes", and unite to make Mokena the most beautiful vilopment".

I am in the "Greater Chicago Development" Very truly yours,
Edmond E. Berg

The Western Skyline

Shoot Four Ducks Fined $65 Each

That it is an expensive matter to shoot game out of season in Cook county has been demonstrated the past week. Last Sunday John A. Klein of Orland Park who is connected with the state game department, arrested several Italians for shooting ducks along Keane Avenue northeast of Orland. The hunters had shot four ducks and when arranged before Justice of the peace Louis Ratschke of Orland Township, were fined $65 for each duck. Two other cases came up in the Blue Island territory where one hunter was fined $40 for shooting a robin and another hunter was fined $25 for shooting a meadow lark.

The largest percentage of game law violaters are foreigners who shoot anything in sight whether it be wild or tame. Stiff fines seem to be the only way to bring these offenders to time.

Frankfort Road Deadlock Goes to State Dept.

The deadlock of securing the right of way thru the village of Frankfort on route 51 is going to be considered by the state highway department following a visit to Frankfort on Thursday by Frank T. Sheets, state superintendent of highways, and the members of the county board. Property owners in the village are holding their property at a certain figure which the county refuses to pay. As a result a deadlock has existed all summer. It is now proposed to have the state engineers make a plat of the disputed property and have the state decide on the best course to pursue to iron out the difficulty.

Schlaegel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schaegeel of Olathe, Kansas, were united in marriage at the home of the bride last Saturday evening, September third. The father of the bride, Mr. John Schaegeel, presented her for the ceremony. Miss Nadine McIntire, a niece of the bride was flower girl. Rev. H. A. Pasley, a retired Methodist preacher and childhood pastor of the bride, officiated.

The bride was dressed in white georgette gown with bridal veil. The maid of honor wore a peach colored gown. Both carried pink rose shower bouquets. The groom and best man wore grey business suits. The home was decorated with myriads of garden flowers in many colors.

Location of Wolf Road and Southwest Highway in Will County getting Vital Issue

The location of the paving of the Wolf Road and also the proposed Southwest super highway in Will County is of paramount interest to this section right now.

These highways are to be constructed under the proposed Will County bond issue. As to matter of location the following plans are being proposed subject to changes:

It is proposed under one plan to bring the Southwest highway down the west side of the Wabash railroad from Cook County to Marley, thence west on Maple Street road in to Joliet. Another plan is to bring this highway thru the town of Homer beginning at the Chas. Doctor farm. This last described routing is being opposed by many of the road boosters on the ground that practically all the right of way would have to be bought, drainage, fills and bridges built, which would make it costly for the county, while on the other hand if the Maple street route is chosen no right of way to speak of will have to be acquired and the saving in cost between the two routes would be enough to build a few more miles of paving in the county.

The Wolf Road which has become one of the most advertised roads in the state, is to be paved to the Will and Cook county line north of Mokena by Cook county, but the carrying on of this highway paving thru Mokena south to the Lincoln highway is meeting with an obstacle at Mokena by way of the Rock Island railroad crossing at the Bowman crossing. The state, it is said, wants to avoid grade crossings and therefore considers this a dangerous crossing, altho this crossing is being protected now by a flagman and is no more dangerous for that matter than the crossings crossed by paved roads at Tinley Park, Midlothian, Oak Forest and other parts of the state.

Three routes are planned for the Wolf Road in Will County. The first to bring this highway from Lincoln highway north thru Mokena to the county line north of Mokena. Second, pave Wolf road from Lincoln highway north to the street running east and west by the Peter Michelsen oil filling station or to the east bound street at the Bowman plant, thence go eastward thru several farms and connect with route 51 thus staying on the south side of the Rock Island tracks and with route 51 cross the Rock Island by subway or viaduct. Third to run in a northerly direction from the Lincoln highway on the New Lenox road under the Rock Island and over Hickory Creek by the Bruder farm east thru the Cappel farm, thru the main street of Mokena and on east to route 51. This last routing is not receiving much favor on the ground that it would cost too much for the right of way and would make a far longer stretch of road to build than the second routing, which would be far shorter and less expensive.

If either one of the last two named routes should be chosen it would mean that there would be a gap of unpaved road from Mokena to the county line and this is something the road boosters of Mokena object to and are insistent that the direct routing of Wolf Road as per the first named plan be adopted by the county map committee.

The proposed highway system to be built by the Will County bond issue of $2,500,000 would comprise over 120 miles of roads, but it is understood that the bond issue may not come up before the county board at their meeting next week as at first thot as the road committee is to take the matter under advisement with the state highway department and work out such plans as will provide a complete hookup of roads that will meet with the approval of the state highway department. If found necessary a special session of the county board could be called to pass on the bond issue.

Building of more than 100 miles of paved roads in Will County by means of a county bond issue was advocated by Frank T. Sheets, state superintendent of highways, in an address before the Joliet Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon Thursday noon.

The meeting, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the Joliet Development council, was attended by more than 300 persons, including many members of the county board of supervisors and was presided over by Fred J. Walsh, president of the Joliet Development council.

The meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the proposed $2,500,000 county bond issue, which the good roads committee of the county board has had under consideration for some months.

Mr. Sheets, who was introduced by Senator Richard J. Barr, prefaced his address with a short discussion of the gasoline tax recently adopted by Illinois.

The state has planned to build 9,800 miles of hard roads, the speaker declared, but the $60,000,000

U. S. Embassies Are Always Kept Busy

Gossipy Folks From Home and Cranks Take Up Lots of Time

London.—"I'm awfully sorry the ambassador is away."

"I can't tell you how sorry I am that the embassy couldn't arrange an audience for you with the king."

"We are sorry, but the office of works will not permit you to climb the clock over the house of parliament."

These and fifty or more stock phrases are kept constantly on tap during the summer rush of the American tourist season in Europe, for during the rush season thousands of Americans crowd the American embassy here demanding everything from an immediate audience with King George or the prince of Wales to the securing of authority to climb the exterior of the clock tower of Westminster palace or Westminster abbey.

Practically everyone who visits Europe from the United States desires to visit one of the embassies or legations of his own country. To the American embassy in London, by virtue of its central position and rank in Europe, come most people. It has been estimated that telephone calls to the embassy here by people who have no actual business to transact, but "only want to hear an American voice again," average more than fifty a day—each taking a precious five or ten minutes' time of a busy secretary or embassy attache.

Worries of U. S. Officials.

If telephone callers were the least trouble, the life of an American embassy or legation abroad would be a continuous path of roses, but it is not, for the callers who present themselves with passports, letters from friendly congressmen, introductions from friends in the Department of State at Washington and a thousand others who feel that their "names must be well known over there," are the chief worries of the American government's foreign representatives.

The callers at the American embassy during twenty minutes here recently, included an associate justice of the Supreme court, who occupied 45 minutes of the ambassador's time, talking small town politics, while another foreign ambassador cooled his heels in an anteroom, waiting for the ambassador long after his appointment time; a holder of a minor office in the Department of Education of the state of New York, who wanted the embassy to arrange a tour around England for a middle western college glee club which he assured the embassy was the "best in the states," and seventeen people clamoring for the two tickets to the gallery of the house of commons which the embassy is daily allotted.

Up to the Secretaries.

Those whose cards or credentials do not establish them as sufficiently prominent to warrant a session for even small-town talk with a busy ambassador are shunted off on some unsuspecting secretary or counselor, whose duty it is to sit from one-half to three-quarters of an hour hearing how famous the visitor from home is, and all about the trip which has either already been taken around Europe or is to be taken.

In an anteroom of the American embassy here is a man who is far more busy than any diplomat in the embassy. His name is Thomas Smith, formerly the courier of the diplomatic pouch between Berlin and London before the United States entered the war. Having been under fire many times while going through the lines between the two great opposing capitals during the war, Smith has long since become accustomed to being under fire of cranks who write long letters to their home town congressmen or even to the State department protesting the "slights and discourteous treatment received at the American embassy in London."

Smith's Job Difficult.

Smith's position is not an easy one, for upon his hands fall all of the visitors at the embassy. Some—a rare few—have legitimate business to transact; the others have a thousand petty wants and complaints which must be cared for by a small embassy staff. Each, however, must be properly cared for and sent away with the impression that he was the most important person who called that day.

The casual tourist who wishes merely to return home and tell the folks how he called upon the ambassador somewhere in Europe is not the only pest who takes the embassy attaches from work on long and tedious reports, for the crank, who enters the embassy with his hat pulled down over his eyes and a wise look on his face may take hours before he is gotten rid of.

This latter person usually demands to see the ambassador immediately on a "subject of great national importance." Frequently he confides to the doorman that he is "next to some important and astounding information." As is the case with all others he sees some secretary or attache in the embassy. His tale is a long and tedious one. His story is usually so absurd that it is seldom investigated, while investigations of the informant have frequently shown him to be a maniac, and in a number of cases these persons have proven to be escaped convicts who have become demented with the constant fear of the police following them.

Where They Get Information.

In some cases their "information" is picked up in saloons and flavored with sufficient imagination to make the story one which they feel the American government would surely be interested in.

One of the worst fears of a foreign embassy or legation is for the petty politician—the attorney general from Podunk, or the state legislator from some remote spot. Although his position may be small, or even laughable to a foreign dignitary, he inevitably wants to be presented at the palace or expects at least to lunch with the ambassador.

It has frequently been found that this type of man actually prefers to be slighted so that he may leave the embassy or legation with great gusto, declaring that he will "write about it to the President and secretary of state."

He frequently does and through the aid of some congressman, who little realizes the problems of those stationed abroad, causes some unsuspecting secretary much trouble and frequently a shift to another post.

Britons Ask When

Is Fresh Egg Fresh

London.—When is a fresh egg fresh? That is what a committee appointed by the ministry of agriculture is trying to ascertain. The committee has had sittings with the National Farmers' union and the National Poultry council on the application for an order making the marking of imported eggs compulsory.

Many poultry dealers said they agreed that the age limit for a fresh egg was fourteen days. A Leith importer, however, said that he had frequently eaten Russian eggs, cooked in various ways, which were six weeks old, but were quite fresh.

Then said the chairman of the committee: "I don't suppose you'd say you eat them from preference, but rather by way of experience."

Pledges on Decrease in Madrid Pawnshop

Madrid, Spain.—Pledges in the Madrid pawnshop, which is run as a city monopoly, showed a decrease of 54,255 items during the last fiscal year, but the municipality managed to earn 612,767 pesetas on the business.

Jewelry formed the larger part of the pledges and clothing was second. The annual public auction of unredeemed pledges brought in 1,912,127 pesetas on articles upon which only 1,299,360 pesetas had been lent.

Pawnshops are municipal monopolies throughout Spain.

hoisting the largest type naval planes. A secret contrivance is set on the deck floor to stop landing airplanes within a distance of several hundred feet. This equipment is said to be fool proof and to prevent possibility of any mishap in landing during a rough sea.

The ship's armament in addition to the 106 airplanes which she carries, consists of eight 8-inch .50 caliber long-range rifles and twelve 5-inch .50 caliber anti-aircraft guns capable of warding off destroyers as well as enemy aircraft attacks. These latter guns are placed in groups of three strategic points about the ship which facilitates concentrated and accurately directed fire as well as rapid supply of ammunition.

The flying deck will accommodate at one time the entire ship's complement of set-up airplanes and still leave sufficient room for a take off. Near the bow is a newly adopted device for launching seaplanes.

SOLOMON DEDICATES THE TEMPLE

LESSON TEXT—I Kings, chapter 8.
GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Worshipping in God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Young Man's Love for God's House.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Love for God's House.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value of God's House to a Community.

The first task of Solomon after his coronation was the building of the temple, a privilege which was denied to his father, David. In his preparation for this task he secured wood from King Hiram of Tyre, stones for the foundations from the Phoenicians, skilled workmen also from King Hiram. It was located on Mount Moriah (II Chron. 3:1). The suitability of this place was due to the fact that the Lord had appeared here to Abraham. Its dimensions were 90 feet long, 30 feet wide, and 45 feet high. It contained the brazen altar, the laver, the golden candlesticks and cherubim. The dedication of the temple was arranged to take place at an auspicious time. The dedicatory services consisted of:

I. Bringing Up the Ark (vv. 1-11).

The ark of the covenant was typical of Jesus Christ. God dwells among men through Jesus Christ (John 1:14). The ark was God's holy dwelling place. This, therefore, must be brought up first and placed in the temple. For the manifestation of the divine presence was the real dedication. When the house of God was to be dedicated the king arranged for a representative gathering of the people, consisting of the elders, princes and heads of the tribes. There were many great men present, but only the priests, God's appointed ministers, moved the ark. The fatal experience of Uzzah in David's time was doubtless clear in their minds. Solomon profited by the blunder of his father. Connected with this service was a very great sacrifice, one in keeping with the occasion. The ark with the two tablets of stone under the mercy seat shows God manifesting Himself to His people on the ground of a law perfectly kept and since atoned for by the shedding of blood. At the completion of the sacrifice, the temple was filled with the glory of the Lord.

II. Solomon's Address to the People (vv. 12-21).

He points out to the people that God had chosen David to be king, yet for certain reasons He would not allow him to build the temple, promising that his son should do the work. Now that the work was done, the temple was built and the ark of the covenant was in its place, they could be assured that God had raised him up in the room of his father.

III. Solomon's Dedicatory Prayer (vv. 22-33).

The ark having now been placed in the most holy place, and the address to the people being ended, the king pours out his soul to God in prayer. In this prayer Solomon gratefully acknowledges God's goodness in the past, giving glory to Him, and pleads that His promise to his father be verified (vv. 22-26); he prays that God's eyes might be continually open toward the temple which He had now taken possession of (vv. 27-33); so that (1) in case of contention between parties He would judge between them (vv. 31, 32); (2) in case of being smitten by the enemy, even though they had sinned, upon confession of the same, God would forgive and restore (vv. 33, 34); (3) in case of famine as chastisement for sin, upon confession and prayer before the temple, God would forgive and send rain (vv. 35, 36); (4) in case of pestilence and sickness, if they pray to God toward the temple, God should hear and forgive (vv. 37-40); (5) in case of the coming of the foreigner who comes at the news of God's greatness, and prays toward Jerusalem, his prayers should be heard (vv. 41-43); (6) in case of going out to battle, their cause should be maintained (vv. 44, 45); (7) in case of being in captivity because of sin, God should hear their prayers and restore (vv. 46-53).

IV. Solomon Blesses the People (vv. 54-61).

On the strength of the covenant promises, he invokes His presence always with them to keep them faithful, and exhorts the people to have their hearts perfect before God, walking in His commandments and statutes.

V. Solomon and the People Offer Sacrifices of Thanksgiving (vv. 62-66).

Country's Many Smiths

About one person in every one hundred in this country is a Smith. The last census found 1,304,300 Smiths in the United States. In other words, there are enough Smiths in the nation to replace the entire population of any one of these states: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Delaware, Florida, Oregon, Colorado, Utah and eight less populous Western states. The renowned Smiths occupy 17 pages in "Who's Who in America."—The Outlook.

Guard British Food Route

Imperialism has increased insect pests by clearing jungles and planting crops, thus upsetting nature's equilibrium. One-fifth of man's tropical harvests are eaten by insects, and as half the British empire is in the tropics, and Dominion farms are in the front line of attack, Britain has established an entomology bureau to discover parasites that can do more than cruisers to keep the food route guarded.

Investments, like charity, should begin at home.

OCCASIONALLY you hear a car owner say: "I'm going to buy such and such a new car because the dealer has offered me the best deal on my present car."

But without understanding the economics of trade-in transactions, you cannot be sure that the largest allowance offered means the best deal for you.

These are basic facts:

- 1 Your present car has only one fundamental basis of value; i. e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.
- 2 Your present car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.
- 3 The largest allowance offered is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.
- 4 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.
- 5 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your present car.

Remember that when you trade-in your present car you are after all making a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit toward the purchase price of a new car.

U. S. S. LEXINGTON TO CARRY OVER A HUNDRED AIRPLANES

Largest Naval Vessel in World Is to Have Deck Surface 900 Feet in Length.

Boston.—The U. S. S. Lexington, largest and highest-powered naval vessel in the world, will be ready for her trials at sea within the next six months.

Final touches are being put on the ship at the Fore River Shipbuilding yards in Quincy, Mass., where she was launched two years ago. The vessel, one of the queen ships of the United States navy, belongs to the electrically driven group that includes the U. S. S. Maryland, West Virginia and Saratoga. The Lexington, like the Saratoga, which was launched in the spring of 1925 at Camden, N. J., is an airplane carrier. Originally these two vessels were to have been battle cruisers and as such would have been among the navy's largest fighting vessels.

Due to the modification of the American naval program decided on at the conference of the limitation of armaments the ships were converted to airplane carriers.

The interiors of the Lexington will be quite different from the space plans below decks on most naval vessels. There will be ample space to store flying machines as well as elevators and cranes with which to hoist them up from below preparatory to hopping off from the flying deck.

Because of the minimum deck apparatus the Lexington seems unusually low in the water. The long sweep of flying deck, broken only by a massive combined funnel enclosure set at one side of the hull, resembles a marine drill ground. The elevators are so constructed as to come flush with the flying deck making an unbroken flying surface about 900 feet long. The elevators are capable of

THE GAS TAX

My idea of "something in its place", would be, a complete revision of all laws, rules and regulations pertaining to Auto equipment.

I would have all Auto fees returnable directly to the Counties in which they were collected, and levied for a specific purpose. The State department to issue the 'tags' for which a fee of one dollar and fifty cents each should be collected and returned from each county.

The "State license" should be removed, and a County "privilege fee", for road maintenance, of from two to five dollars a car regardless of size or power, should replace it. No other tax or license of any kind, local or otherwise, to be levied or collected an automotive equipment except the usual permit.

A tax on gasoline to be levied by, co-terminated used by each County for a designated purpose in road construction in the County where collected and used by each county object shall have been accomplished, the tax on gasoline in that particular County to be automatically repeated.

The making and the administration of the laws, the preservation of uniformity is or should be the province of the state. The improvements should be delegated to the various units of local government instituted for that purpose.

Trunk line Highways can be taken care of through and under the direction of the State Highway commission which should have a general supervision over all projected systems, more especially those Highways traversing the length and breadth of the state, and connecting with routes in adjoining states.

We are going to get some good out of our "gas tax", how much or how little depends not on the law itself but on the departments. This particular law is much condemned and undoubtedly deservedly so, but the next general Assembly will be able to amend it so that it will be entirely satisfactory.

Voters, check up on the "bacon" brought home to the District by your Legislative traders, you will discover that the system is deplorable and unprofitable.

We did not start it, we do not want it, why do we have to submit to it? We don't and won't.

STATE FAIR NOTES

Even the most casual observer at the State fair held in Springfield, could not be otherwise than impressed by the evident strength of Governor Small, and the hold he has up on the rank and file of the "every day" people of the State.

August 25, Governor's day at Springfield, was not marked by any particular political demonstration.

There was no special stage setting, no grand stand play, such as marked the assembly at Kankakee. It wasn't necessary. It was just an outpouring of Illinois citizens who were there to see the fair and to prove by their presence and enthusiasm, their loyalty to the "Road Builder," the man who has come through the fire of political intrigue, and who, although wounded by the biting flames of malignant persecution, stands more firm and determined than ever in his advocacy of equal rights and privileges for both "up" and "down" states.

The attendance on Governor's day at the fair was a record breaker, it being estimated that in the neighborhood of 125,000 customers were there to see and be seen.

William Hale Thompson, Chicago's "America First" Mayor, came to Springfield by special car. He came early and his equipment was quietly "parked" where he could continue his morning snooze undisturbed, and he was still wrapped in slumber, as was evidence by his heavy breathing and mighty billowing of the bed covering that enveloped his rather robust form, when Governor Small called on him. No "snap shots" were taken of the two principle characters in Illinois affairs, on this occasion, for although the Governor was adequately clothed and groomed, Bill was not just exactly prepared to enter a beauty contest, to say the least.

Governor Small did not remain long in William's apartment on the private car. Possibly just long enough to tell the "big boy" to "get a hustle on himself, hook on his trousers", (he might have called them "pants" or "breeches") and "get over to the residence in time to join the parade".

No one knows the cause for the Mayor's delay, after the Governor departed. He may have fallen asleep again, he may have lost his collar button, or his safety razor may have "hogged down" on him. Whatever it was that detained him, he did not reach the Executive Mansion until the time had passed for starting the procession.

When the Parade started, the Governor and the Mayor occupied the first car in the line.

Right here I am going to "pause to remark" that this attitude may be held as significant of the position they will occupy in the 1928 Political Parade for official honor and recognition.

It is time, as reported, that Mr. Thompson has demanded that Governor Small close his doors to certain of the Governor's Friends, objectionable to the rather particular gentleman from Chicago. It is also time, and those who know the Governor best, are aware of the fact, that he never has and never will desert a Friend, and will not accede to the Mayor's demands.

The answer to the situation, can be found in the well known characteristics of Big Bill. He is a good sport, and the Governor's loyalty to his friends, and his refusal to "turn them down", is sure to appeal to the Mayor, and finally to increase his admiration for and belief in the sincerity, the reliability and sterling, staying qualities of the Governor himself.

The storm has passed, and I can see a clearing of the skies for the 1928 Campaign. We are going to turn our attention from the personalities of the aspirants for gubernatorial selection, and give a lot more attention to the issues, and the would be representatives in Senate and House.

We are going to get out the old scales, dust off the cobwebs, and clean them up, preparatory to doing some careful weighing, and when we get to "testing them out", take it from me, the "short weight" fellows are going to find it convenient to be conspicuous by their absence.

This weighting process will accomplish two very important things. It will turn the spot light of public scrutiny on both the just and the unjust. The honest and capable will receive a reward of confidence and recognition, and the dishonest, whether capable or incompetent, will be relegated to the realm of the "never agains".

Brains, bull and bunk, all start with the letter "B", but there is a vast difference in their constituents parts. Although easily detected in the Political concoction, it is surprising to what a degree the two latter are tolerated.

The regular "gray matter" is to be demanded in the coming struggle for Political supremacy and the candidate who attempts to 'get-by' with, or deals in anything else, will not stand as much chance as the proverbial snow ball in the infernal regions.

What Seemed Humorous

Mother was entertaining a caller, when suddenly Dorothy, who had been playing on the floor, yawned prodigiously. "My, what a big yawn for such a little girl!" exclaimed the caller. "Yes," agreed Dorothy, "and the funny part is that I wasn't listening at all to what you were saying!"

THE "GET-RICH-QUICK EXPRESS"

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

SO many millions of people have been defrauded out of their savings that it is the most natural thing for them to assume that the failure of any company in which they have stock is due to dishonest manipulations within the company.

The facts are that many companies go on the rocks financially due to mismanagement and poor judgment and without any intent on the part of those in charge to defraud the stockholders.

Because men of good moral character organize a company for the purpose of engaging in some business enterprise is no assurance in itself that the business will succeed. Good intentions are one thing and business ability another, and usually unless there is plenty of business ability the business fails.

Before you invest in any new enterprise you should not only satisfy yourself as to the integrity of the managers but you should be certain that they have the experience, the technical knowledge and the ability to make the business a success.

What I am seeking to emphasize is the importance of making a thorough investigation before you draw your savings from the bank and entrust them in the hands of persons who may lose them, not through dishonesty but through poor business judgment.

Too many inexperienced investors rely on hearsay and on information too general to be at all adequate, when it comes to parting with their cash. So I say, make it a rule always to go to the bottom of every investment, and as it costs nothing to consult your banker, or the local Better Business Bureau, or the National Better Business Bureau, New York City, leave no stone unturned in order that you get the facts.

If you find that the organizers are trying to avoid an investigation, take that as a tip for making a most searching investigation.

In making investments a hasty investigation, or a superficial investigation is a most dangerous thing. To get the facts about an investment you usually have to dig deep and wide, and no rush investigation permits you to do this. Promoters of the worst type often welcome a hasty investigation, knowing that it does not give the investor sufficient time to get below the beautifully camouflaged surface finish with which they have so adroitly clothed their fake stock.

The road to happiness and contentment lies along the route to safe investment, the road made safe by the slogan, "Investigate Before You In-

Slaves Were Shaved

A clean-shaven face in the East was originally a sign of servitude. Old pictures show kings and conquerors heavily bearded and with long hair, while their slaves and captives are clean-shaven and close-cropped. The Greeks and the Romans later discarded "face fungus," as it gave their enemies a hand-hold in the close fighting, which was, of course, the rule in those days.

Tobacco leaves when submitted to chemical analysis yield nicotine, which is its most characteristic constituent; albumin, a gluten-like substance; gum, resin, maleic and citric acids, and a large amount of inorganic constituents, 100 parts of the dry leaf yielding from about 19 to 27 per cent of ash, in which potash, lime and silica preponderate.

SMART WOOLEN SPORTS COATS; TRIMMING FOR AUTUMN HATS

TO AUTUMN'S first call for chic, there is no answer so timely as that of a smart-looking sports coat. This is the time of year when the warm tones of the modish leaf browns and other intermingling ruddy shades of the new woollens tune in most harmoniously with nature's own color scheme.

Patterned woollens, plaids, checks and interesting geometrical figures are having "their day" this season; that is, for sports wear. For dressy coats, suede cloth, velvet and broadcloth are receiving highest acclaim.

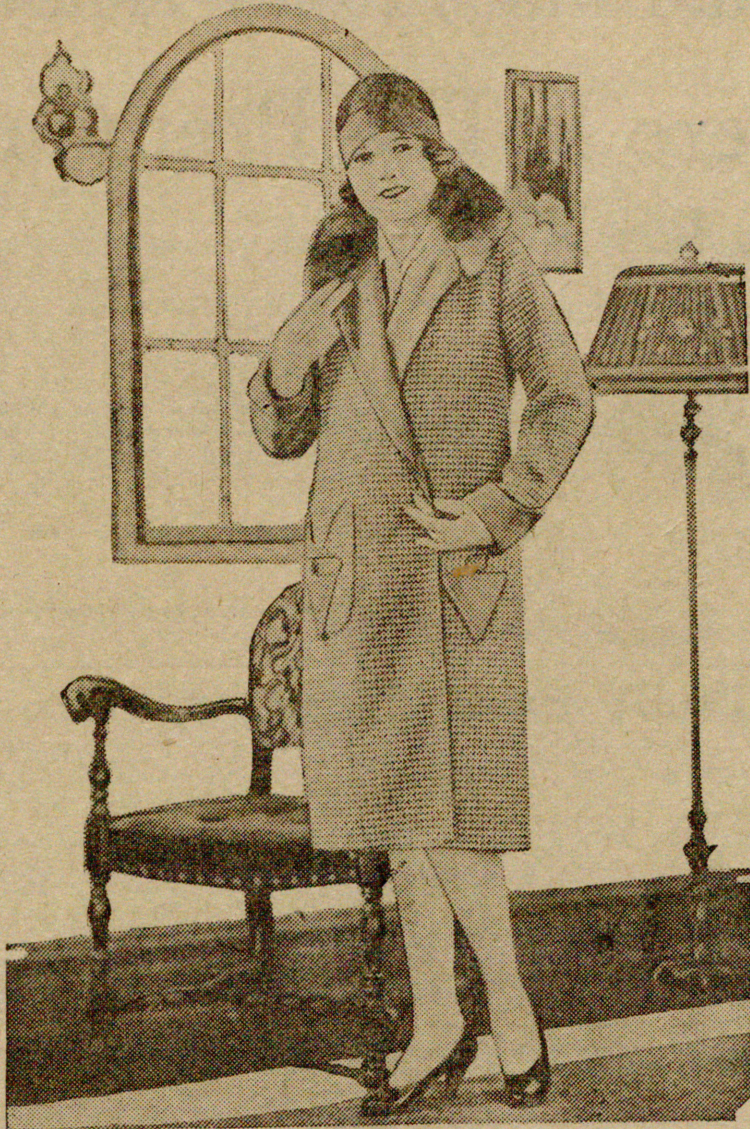

Very clever things are being accomplished in fabric design such as the globe? Quite a foolish question, to be sure, unless it serves its purpose of calling attention to the fact that the early autumn hats are lavishly stitched row upon row.

The new feature of this stitching is that much of it is done with metal thread. The effect of this glint and glitter on velvet or on felt is arresting.

Another attractive note sounded in this season's advance models is the softness of crown and brim. Even hats broad of brim can be folded up without injury to them, so flexible are they.

These outstanding style items are tapestry effects, ombre colorings, chevron stripes, with tweed and basket weaves coming in for a full share of notice.

While the new flare lines are being adopted for the more formal models, the straight silhouette is retained for the sports type. Saddle shoulder sleeves appear most often in these travel and sports coats. There's a display of genius in clever pockets, in discreet trimmings of solid-colored fabric, and all signs point to a season of lavish fur trimmings, though conservative types often show merely a fur collar as here pictured. As to linings, either crepe de chine or natural kasha is in favor. There are many belted coats in the advance collections. Often the belt is of self accented in the collection of lovely autumn chapeaux presented in the illustration.

The top hat is a machine stitched felt shape, done row and row about the brim and the crown band, also on self-trimming at the side.

The hat to the left has a soft flexible brim with undulating edge. There are rows of fine machine stitching done in gold thread both on crown and on brim. A wreath of gilded leather leaves at the base of the crown is in harmony with the gold and black theme of the design.

There is some tendency to off-the-face brims as shown in the model to the left of center in this picture. This brim has no stiffening whatever. It is cleverly held in place by a bow of fabric, but just as often colorful and unique suede belts are worn, which contrast strikingly with the novelty-patterned material of the coat.

Diagonal stripes are one of the new items among coats which strike an introductory autumn note.

Not only are shaggy furs used for collars on tweeds and novelty woollens, but some of the very smart newer modes are collared and cuffed with seal or beaver.

Coats after the style of the one illustrated are ideal for the schoolgirl, as well as for sports or travel.

For the mind that dotes on statistics here is an interesting problem to figure out. If all the rows of stitching which appear on the new felt and velvet hats were to form in one continuous length, how many times will this now-so-stylish stitching reach around the circumference of

Witty Retort That

Put End to Heckling

The late Rev. S. S. Henshaw, primitive Methodist minister, will long be remembered in Sheffield, says an English periodical. In earlier days he was an active radical, and did much to help the parliamentary candidates of his party. A little man, he had a cutting wit. On one occasion, at election time, his candidate was being badly heckled by a giant publican, who had come to smash the Liberals. The member found him a difficult customer. At last the little preacher plucked his sleeve and whispered: "Let me deal with him." Advancing to the front of the platform, he asked blandly: "Now, sir, what is it you want?" The burly publican, thumbs in the armpits of his waistcoat, eyed him scornfully for a few moments, and then growled: "Thee! Why, man, I could ate thee!" "I dare say you could," flashed back Mr. Henshaw, smiling; "but if you did, you would have more brains in your stomach than you have ever had in your head." There was no further trouble.

STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in the open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his fiancée, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Guthrie meets Doctor Querrier, geologist, and his sister Joan. Querrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing McDonald." At Elkwan an Indian girl, Ninda, tuberculosis victim, whom Garth has befriended, is dying. Joan, trained war nurse, cares for Ninda, but the girl dies. Three of McDonald's party visit Elkwan seeking to buy gun shells. From them Garth learns of evil talk among the Indians concerning him and Ninda. With Etienne's help Garth wins the friendship of Saul Souci, "medicine man" of the Crees, and gets his promise to persuade the Crees to take their furs to Elkwan instead of to McDonald. Garth is ambushed by Joe Mokoman, Ninda's reputed father. "Shot," Garth's alreale companion, saves him, and the Indian is taken, a prisoner, to Elkwan. Garth sends Mokoman to McDonald with a message of defiance, and the war is on.

South of the Big Point shoals, the great Attawapiskat, carrying the drainage of a vast hinterland, debouched through two mouths, a wide delta, and, eight miles to the south, a single channel, the Lowaski. Saug in his tight little post above the delta of the upper mouth of the river, Graham, the factor, independent of the fox skins of Akimiski, waited for the rich trade from the interior to come to him. But some of the hunters trading at the post always wintered on the island and before he crossed in search of Saul, Guthrie wished to get the latest news from Albany and arrange for the dispatch of a dog-team, informing his chief of his crossing to the island. How far the crew of the schooner were prepared to go in the struggle for the trade, he had no means of knowing, but of their energy and daring there was no doubt. If Souci were successful and the free-traders attempted to interfere with the hunters crossing to Elkwan, there might be an ugly row. So the fast dog-team doubled back down the coast ice and before noon drew in to the high shore at Attawapiskat.

Graham looked up in surprise to see the tall figure of his neighbor to the north walk into the trade-room. Graham was old and waiting only for his service pension. His days with the dogs on the shore ice or inland over the white barriers were over. If McDonald were wintering on the island there would be little Akimiski fox traded at a Hudson's Bay post that year. Of that he was sure. He couldn't see how crossing to the island after the strait closed would help the matter. The schooner would get the Christmas trade and pick up the fur through the winter as it was trapped. It was hard on Elkwan, but he had his upriver trade, McDonald couldn't touch that. Thus Graham, who lacked but two years of retirement, and loved the comfort of his snug quarters.

"Well, what brings you here in thirty-below weather?" he replied to Guthrie's salutation. "I've been hugging a fire for a week, trying to thaw out."

Guthrie laughed. "I'm on my way to the island, Graham. I want you to relay this letter to Cameron."

"The island?" Graham gasped in surprise. "How—you mean the strait's closed—set over the shoals?"

"Yes!" And Guthrie hastily outlined the situation on Akimiski and his plans.

"You think Souci will control the Elkwan hunters? Why should they cross the ice to you when McDonald will pay more for their pelts?"

Guthrie's face reflected his irritation. "Graham, I'm employed to get fur—not smoke by the stove and wait for it to come in. As Cameron expects this letter and Christmas is only ten days away, I'll thank you to start a team with it at once."

The victim of Guthrie's sarcasm reddened under the ruthless characterization of his sedentary tendencies, but his pension was near, and the risk of a dash over the young ice was Guthrie's, not his, so he magnanimously overlooked the thrust.

"I'll send a team, yes, if that's Cameron's orders. I'll say you're a fool, though, to cross. A good wind will break up that new ice and cut you off. It's never in my memory closed before January. Still, it's your job, not mine. Go ahead and get yourself drowned, if you want to."

"Some of your people winter there?"

"Oh, yes! Six or eight families. But I can't help that."

"No, you can't," agreed Guthrie, catching Etienne's furtive look. "Well, we'll have just about light enough to cross in, so I'll start."

As the dogs hurried over the wind-brushed shell of the strait, broken by drifts and hummocks, split by tide cracks, irregular with crushed ice masses lifted into pressure ridges, the eyes of the men on the light sled were focused far out on what, the week before, had been impassable black water. Eight miles out, half way across, its drift ice, thrall to tide and wind, had threatened with swift ruin the eggshell of a canoe, which challenged its barrier. But now, over the shoals, the channel had been sealed. As the dog-team reached the newly frozen gap, Etienne and Guthrie went ahead to test the ice with axes. In defiance of the tide, the fierce frost had set three-inch ice. Anxiously the men swept the width of the channel with glasses. There were no breaks. So, led by the scampering alreale and Guthrie, with Etienne driving the huskies from the tail of the sled, they took the crossing on the run.

A half-mile out when fear of thin ice had left him and he swung along with shot in front, Garth suddenly felt the ice vibrate beneath his mo-casins. The sled with the dogs would go through, unless they came with a rush. Turning as he ran, he waved to Etienne—their agreed-upon signal for speed.

"Marche! mes enfants!" The long caribou thong cracked on the lead dog's ears. With a surprised yelp Castor, spreading his feet, came with the team at a wild gallop. On they rushed, straining, slipping huskies, nails scratching the ice for footing, and swinging toboggan, urged on by Etienne, for a break through meant swift drowning for the dogs from the drag of the sled, and freezing in the stinging wind for the driver, if he reached firm ice.

A hundred yards of mad scramble and the second dog slipped, slid sideways, jerking the leader off his feet. The sled swung in a wide skid. Passing his thrashing huskies on the run, Etienne called them to follow. Before the sled stopped its swing, the dogs were up and hard on their master's heels. A hundred yards and they reached the heavier ice—minutes of suspense, and the lead was crossed.

The two friends gripped hands beside the panting dogs.

"Did you feel it?" cried Guthrie. "Thought I was going through! Felt like running on stretched canvas!"

"I saw it geeve undair you, and crack de wheep before you turn. We go 'tro' een cat channel, and pouf! we nevaire care eef McDonald Ha! Ha! get de fur or not, eh?"

Somewhere north of Big point in a valley sheltered by the tundra from the winds off the ice fields, the sons of old Souci had a base camp. But the Indian had given Garth no rendezvous in case he managed to cross the strait before Christmas, for Souci carried a roving commission, and his work lay where he found the Elkwan hunters. To Garth the island was unknown country, but Etienne had trapped there and they started up the shore ice, bound for the mouth of the Ptarmigan, a river which headed deep in the interior, confident of learning Souci's whereabouts from the first Indian they met. For news of the coming of the old chief to the island would be passed swiftly from hunter to hunter, valley to valley. And now the closing of the strait had greatly enhanced the value and importance of Souci's embassy to the Crees. Those loyal to the old company could cross for the New Year's feast at the post, bringing their pelts; those wavering in the direction of the trade goods of McDonald could not now meet Saul's appeals with the objection that a barrier of open water, running with flow, would crush their canoes. But the longer he dwelt on the attractions of the schooner at the cove, the less confident he grew of saving much of the fox trade. Few of the fickle Crees would resist the blandishments of the free-trader's agents. Then with a start he realized that he was ignoring the scheme the old chief had outlined to Etienne, and wondered if the magic was working—if the mad medicine of the sorcerer had conjured a tabu against the schooner. In the valley of the Ptarmigan they would find a camp and learn.

As the huskies trotted smartly up the coast of the island while Shot, free lance, ranged widely along shore in search of adventure, Guthrie's thoughts temporarily deserted his mission on Akimiski to dwell—now that he had seemingly burned his bridges—on his status at home. For it would not be foreign to his brother's egotism and reverence for the conventions to read Garth out of the family, since he had written refusing to return. The gossip, following his failure to join the staff of the Guthrie Steel company and lead Ethel Falconer in all her blond loveliness to the altar, would be gail to the palate of the recently knighted head of the Guthries. The neglect of his express command to the exile to shake the mud of James Bay from his sealskin boots and assume the responsibilities of a family man and a man of family would, in all likelihood, mean that on his return to Montreal there would be no position in the works—no brother's house open—to the rebel. His personal means, inherited from his father, were modest. Charles' fortune was the result of his own efforts—and a fortuitous war. That was why Charles demanded wholesome respect and absolute obedience from his younger brother. At the thought the younger brother smiled in his fur hood, ringed with rime from his frozen breath. From the man who had led his platoon at the Somme and his battalion in front of Amiens, the dignity and swiftly made fortune of Charles commanded no deference and little respect. On his return—his return? He had committed himself to making good at Elkwan for his employers—for his own self-respect. What he had started he would see through. There might be no return—unless a certain letter in the Christmas mail should—.

Then his thought, until the dogs swung off the sea-ice and into the broken going at the mouth of the Ptarmigan, were of three swift days at Elkwan and two on the coast—of eyes, abstracted, perplexed, at times wistful, and a dark head silvered with moonlight, on the high shore above the Albany.

As the dog-team left the coast and followed the rough river trail into the hills, its toil began, and Etienne's wisdom in bringing a toboggan instead of a sea sled equipped with runners was vindicated. For once under the lee of hills, they found snow deep on the shell of the river and in places, where wind eddies had dipped into the valley, new drift, through which they broke trail on snowshoes for the sled, while the dogs, who had galloped over the brushed sea-ice, wallowed to their traces. From the river fringe of willows and alders the black spruce scrub reached back up the slopes to fade and disappear under the shoulders of the barrens. There low junipers and hardy Labrador tea alone survived the hammering of the winds on the undulating miles of blueberry heath and caribou moss, swept, over exposed areas, of all snow.

Suddenly, as they rounded a bend which had shut off all view upstream, Etienne, who was ahead breaking trail, shouted and stopped, pointing in the direction of some thick scrub in the distance.

"Camp up here!"

Hidden Treasure Mute Reminder of Tragedy

When installing a bathroom in an old house in Vienna not long ago, an attic was disclosed above a closet which was supposed to reach clear to the roof. In it were the remnants of an old baker's oven and a wooden dough trough covered with grain sacks bearing the date 1693. Beneath the trough were household effects that evidently had belonged to a well-to-do middle-class family, such as linen garments, dishes, cups, jewelry, 330 gold coins and 1,143 silver coins. Among the former were several ducats. The most recent of the coins were dated

Easy for This Student

A school inspector in Hampshire, England, having set the children some sums to do, and having gathered the answers for correction, demanded silence, during which the class might write a description of a cricket match. Looking up a moment later he saw a boy with folded arms, regarding his paper with satisfaction. "Well, my boy," he said, "surely you can find something to say about cricket." "Oh! I've finished, sir!" was the answer, and the essay was handed up. This is what the inspector read: "Match postponed on account of the wet."

Rising in the still air of the valley, a wisp of bluish smoke hung against the background of black spruce.

"Good! Now we'll get some news of Souci."

Spurred by the quickened pace of the trail breaker and the call of Garth, the five huskies threw their shoulders into the collars. Then, farther on, a stretch of wind-packed snow gave them footing and the yelping team, led by Shot, raced to the tips of the hunters' camp.

"Kequay!" called Etienne, approaching the tips half buried in the snow for protection from the wind and circled by the usual debris and paraphernalia of a winter camp. Turning to Garth he said: "De men are on de trap-line wid de dogs."

Again he called, and, after a space, a shawled head was thrust through the door flap of a tent.

"Where's your man?" asked Savanne in Cree.

"On the lines. Who are you?"

"We are from Elkwan." And, as the woman emerged from the tipi followed by another and two children, Etienne saw that he was talking with Indians from the lower rivers—strangers.

"Have you seen Saul Souci, the Elkwan Treaty Chief? Where is the camp of his sons—what river?"

The swart faces of the Cree women defied the sharp scrutiny of the halfbreed. Surprise, doubt, appeared to curb a desire to laugh at the question of the stranger. They met each other's black eyes in a quizzical look; then the elder of the two said: "Souci, the shaman, we have not seen. His sons are said to camp north of here on the Rabbit River."

The acute brain of Etienne strove to solve the riddle of the squaw's secret amusement. At last he decided that Joe Mokoman had won over their men to the free-trader, but why Souci had not appeared on the Ptarmigan was a mystery.

"Do you know the strait has closed? You can cross to Elkwan for the New Year's feast," he hazarded.

The women smiled. "We go to the trader at Seal cove with our fox pelts," said the old squaw. "There we get honest prices for fur—from the trader who always laughs."

It was evident that here Joe Mokoman had done his work well. Then Etienne cautiously began his countermining. His dark face set in a look of surprise and horror. "Did you not hear?" he cried.

"No!"

"Why this trader brought that face from the land of demons across the Big Water? He angered them. He is a sorcerer and bewitches those who bring him their pelts." Etienne hastily interpreted the conversation to Guthrie as he watched the effect of his bombshell on the startled faces of the squaws.

"He makes bad medicine?" gasped the women.

Savanne gravely nodded his hooded head, then added: "He has bewitched Joe Mokoman to betray the Cree hunters and bring them to his boat. Those who go will never love their wives and families again," he remarked with finality.

At the last the faces of the squaws visibly grayed. They chattered together excitedly. Etienne's explanation of the cause of the mutilation of McDonald had struck deep into the marrow of their superstitions. He hastily drove his advantage home.

"Saul Souci will tell you that the trader McDonald Ha! Ha! is a friend of demons."

"Saul Souci?" cried a squaw in protest. "He is a shaman and friend of the trader who laughs."

It was the turn of Savanne to have his mental balance jarred. Souci the friend of McDonald? What could they mean? But he was equal to the emergency.

"Souci, the friend of McDonald Ha! Ha! Mokoman tells that tale to the hunters because he fears Souci the shaman."

Disturbed though she was, the Cree woman laughed in Etienne's face. "Mokoman was here this morning—there are his sled tracks. One sleep ago he says Souci was at the schooner of the trader and they shook hands. Souci is the friend of McDonald Ha! Ha!"

United States Ahead of World in Reading

Some self-confessed intellectuals question the high plane of the American's taste for reading matter but they cannot deny that the American reads more than the other peoples of the world. Government statistics disclose that there are 20,001 newspapers in the United States and that the country's book business last year was $130,000,000. The nation consumed 10,000,000 tons of paper last year. In face of these amazing figures none can complain that Americans do not read enough. If we don't all read classical literature all of the time we at least read and that is a healthful sign. A comparison of paper consumption reveals that more paper is required for the United States than for all of the rest of the world and that this country's consumption per capita is more than twice as great as that of the next largest user of paper.—Bangor Commercial.

Queer Beliefs Still Existing in Norway

That superstition is still strong in some parts of Norway is plainly shown by a report from a governmental official who visited Lofoten in northern Norway. In a desolate place, where he took a rest, he found the body of a dog nailed to a birch tree and hanging with head downward. A closer investigation of this uncanny find revealed a piece of wood nailed to the tree under the dog and bearing the inscription: "I give you, oh my faithful dog, to death. Kneeling and in sorrow, I kill you and nail you to this tree with incantation that all wild beasts shall lose their teeth and leave my cows and reindeers in peace."

In all probability, one of the Lapps has here besought the spirits and followed the tradition of thousands of years ago when favorite animals were sacrificed to gain the favor of the Great Spirit of Nature.

The Amateur Profession

A professional puglist said the other day:

"I've got nothing against amateur sport. There's a lot of money in it. 'What profession, son, do you desire to take up when you're a man?' a Los Angeles banker asked his little boy.

"The profession of an amateur athlete," the little boy answered."

Don C. Hall -SAYS-

The "road issue" has become a "hobby horse" for worn out "political hacks" to ride into office on. It will take some jockeying to saddle in 1928.

I am going to give Governor Small credit for all he has done, and I am not going to lay at his door, the responsibility for the unfulfilled promises that are the bones of contention at this time, in connection with expectation, anticipation and lack of realization in highway construction in Illinois.

The half wise political scheme, who deals in deceptive methods and foists his false promises on the unwary, is the most despicable of all public characters, but the susceptible dupe is not entirely blameless.

The voter of to-day has every opportunity for being thoroughly informed, need not take things for granted, should not allow anyone to do his thinking for him, and above all should observe carefully the "manner of man", making promises taking stock of the collateral security behind his assertions as a guarantee of fulfillment.

Not alone in Illinois, but in every state, there can be found, Political "lesser lights", who flaunt their wares in the name of the "higher ups", and who, to further the condemnation of their own aspirations, do not hesitate to compromise those whose machine they have usurped and are riding to its possible destruction, by using the word "we" meaning "The Governor and I", or whoever he may be using as his particular "political prop", and then the word goes out that the aforesaid "Governor" or "Senator" as the case may be, has promised us a certain possible return for our "fringe".

Do we trade? We do! Do we get what we are supposed to be trading for? We do not! I have never known one of those political fur-liners to make good in a return of promised service for the vote of confidence extended. Why then, do we submit to it? It is a condition and creates a situation that destroys the confidence that should exist between the elector and the elected and is the disturbing element that confronts the "higher up" who has been made the "goat" for the "duds" who infest the Legislative halls and Department of State.

Ex Governor Frank O. Lowden, now the most prominent presidential possibility for 1928, is to be given great credit for promoting the first real comprehensive step in Illinois state wide road construction and to the ambitious and untiring efforts of Governor Len Small, we owe, largely, the continuation of the program, for it is generally conceded, that without his persistent and determined backing, and unselfish interest he has taken in his endeavor to give to Illinois the proud distinction of having the greatest and most comprehensive system of trunk line highways possible we would not occupy the position we do now, as one of the foremost states in the efficiency of our road construction and highway system.

It is true that errors have been made by the Highway Department, grave errors, possible some of them irreparable, but we have THE ROADS, and after all, while that is not "everything" it is the great "something", a part at least of what we have been looking for and that which we should reasonably expect.

You have undoubtedly observed that the map issued by the Highway Department under the caption, "State of Illinois, Department of Public Works and Buildings, Division of Highways, State Bond issue road system TO BE BUILT UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE $100,000,000 BOND ISSUE LAW" was misleading; whether carelessly or intentionally so, I am not prepared to say. Personally, I always contend, that I would rather be termed a knave than a fool. I accord to the Department of Public Works, the same privilege in explaining their responsibility for the map in question.

Of course it was not the fault of the Department that the voters were not informed of the evident fact that the proposed Bond issue would be inadequate to provide the necessary funds for the additional program, as it would require approximately $50,000,000 of the $100,000,000 to complete the balance of the $60,000,000 Bond Issue program, of designated highways.

Had that situation been set plainly before the voters however as it reasonably could and should have been much of the discontent, dissatisfaction and consequent embarrassment to the Governor and to the Highway Department could have been prevented.

"Where are our roads that they promised us would be constructed in eighteen months?" is the cry heard on every hand. I ask "That who" promised? "Why they" told us that if we put "so and so" across at the last election we would surely get our road? I persist in my question "They, why who do you mean by they?" and there it stops, the "theys" are the stumbling blocks, the "theys" who "got across" close to the haunches and under the broad coat tails of Governor Small and have been responsible for much of the Executives shambling, if he has been slow in awarding prizes to the expectant, "they" alone are responsible for the false impressions, and the "boomerang" is coming back to bruise the hand that cast it.

"How far is the Governor involved?" you ask. I put that question, pointedly, to the Governor myself, and his reply was "Mr. Hall of Mokena, I have promised nothing. I have only stated that which I hoped to do, and if I can carry out my program, I will give every town, city, village and rural community in the State of Illinois a concrete road.

What have we to back up the sincerity of that statement? Is there any evidence of the Governor's lack of interest or desire to "lay down on the job" he is undertaken?

A glance over the field will I think convince the most skeptical, that the Governor is possibly ambitious to lay a "monument in concrete" to his own memory, as a consistent Chief Executive of a State he hopes to serve until his task is completed.

Pass up the "they says". Get it straight from the "conductor", and not from the "strap hangers" in his political coach.

Next week a few words about the state fair and the "up" and "down" staters.

Miss Alma Lehnert Weds. Joliet Man

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. John Evangelical church, Wednesday evening, Sept. 7, at 7:30 o'clock, when Miss Alma Lehnert of Mokena became the bride of Mr. Carl Kern of Joliet.

The church was prettily decorated in pink and white flowers, ferns and asparagus ferns.

Preceding the wedding march, Leon Tonn sang an appropriate solo, singing march played by Mrs. Emil

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march played by Mrs. Emil Krapp, entered the two ushers, Clarence and Albert Lehnert and took their place beside the altar. They were followed by the bride's maid, Mrs. Ernest Lehnert who was gowned in a frock of blue silk and carried an arm bouquet of roses and was attended by the bride's brother Joe.

Mrs. John Kern of Chicago gowned in blue with a bouquet of roses acted as matron of honor. At the altar little five year old Lois Suess of Chicago, a niece of the groom, dressed in a pretty frock of pink georgette and with a band of pink ribbon holding her beautiful curls in place, was the ring bearer and came serenely down the aisle carrying the two rings on a pink silk pillow. She was followed by Miss Linda Lehnert, niece of the bride, dressed in blue who scattered flower petals in the path of the bridal couple.

The bride attired in a chestnut tan gown with crepe and carrying a bouquet of bride's roses, entered on the arm of her brother Ernest and they were met at the altar by the groom and best man, John Kern who entered the chancel from the vestry room.

Rev. W. J. Cramer pastor of the church, read the service which united them in holy wedlock.

Mr. Tonn sang another solo following which the bridal party repaired to the parlors of the church where a reception was held and supper served to 75 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Kern left Thursday for a trip to Denver, Colorado and will be at home in two weeks at 122 Aken avenue in Joliet where the groom has a home in readiness.

Many beautiful gifts were received.

Routing of Paving Vital Issue

bond issue and the $100,000,000 approved by the voters would not have been sufficient and it was necessary to obtain the gas tax.

With the aid of the gasoline tax the state will be able to complete its hard road program by the year 1933, but had it been forced to go along with just the revenue from the vehicle licenses, the project could not have been finished until 1942 he said.

Under the $60,000,000 bond issue the state built 119 miles of hard roads in Will County. Mr. Sheets said, and an additional 96 miles is being built with the $100,000,000 bond issue.

$3,000,000 for Will County. During the next three years, in which the 96 miles of paving will be completed, the state will spend approximately $3,000,000 in Will County, Supt. Sheets declared.

After stressing the necessity of having an additional 100 or more miles of paved road built to link up with the roads built or to be built by the state, Mr. Sheets advised Will county to designate its bond issue roads as state aid roads in order to have them built under state supervision and also to have them maintained by the state highway department.

Methods thru which a county road building program could be financed were explained by Supt. Sheets during a conference with members of the board of supervisors bond issue committee, Senator Richard J. Barr and William D. Heise, attorney.

During the session Mr. Sheets pointed out that with a bond issue of $2,500,000 it might be possible to build 100 miles of road.

He said that the state had found that it cost an average of $30,000 a mile for roads, but this figure took into account the cost of culverts and bridges.

"Along with the bond issue money Will county would receive approximately $108,000 as its yearly share of the gasoline tax refund," Mr. Sheets said. "This is a conservative estimate and the figure may run much higher."

"Based on a full valuation of Will county of $111,734,000 and a bonding power of 2 1/2 per cent, it would be possible to have a bond issue for road purposes of $2,793,000. During 20 years with a gasoline refund averaging $108,000, more than $2,000,000 would be available from this source alone."

"On a bond issue of $2,500,000 the total cost for 20 years, figuring bonds and interest, would be $3,371,875, based on an interest rate of 4 1/2 for the bonds."

$7.50 Tax Increase.

"If your county voted $2,500,000 for bonds for highway purpose it means that a man owning property valued $5,000 would pay about $7.50 increase in yearly tax. If the gasoline tax is used to retire bonds instead of a bond issue your tax rate would not be increased to any great extent, as there would be approximately enough from the gas tax alone to take care of the road construction."

"It might be a better plan, however, to use the gasoline tax and a bond issue so that your road system could be built in three to four years."

"Assuming that you plan 100 miles of paved highways, it could be built in from three to four years under a bond issue and gasoline tax refund."

Mr. Sheets stated that Will County could designate all of the roads contemplated under the bond issue as a state aid highway system. This means that the roads would be built under state plans and specifications and that when completed they would be forever maintained by the state.

The importance of adopting the plan met with favor of the bond issue committee which consists of Fred Francis, chairman, and Oliver Flint, Charles Lauth, Frank Hegg, Jr., Ray Mayo, John Baskerville, and Clinton R. Hulbert.

Mr. Sheets stated that if the committee was ready to report to the county board it would be necessary that all roads on the proposed system be designated as state aid roads and that the road construction would then receive the supervision of the state highway department.

According to Mr. Francis, plans have been made for about 170 miles of road for county bond issue program. Changes will be made so that the mileage will not exceed more than 120 miles.

Mr. Kinger of the Chicago Regional Planning Commission also addressed the gathering and predicted that by 1950 the population of Joliet and Will County will be 160,000.
